

Classical Studies Major Degree Progress Report

Prerequisite

One course on classical culture, broadly defined: any departmental course, a freshman seminar taught by Classics faculty, HUM 216-217, HUM 247, or other course approved by the DUS.

Course Term

Program of Study

The Classical Studies program must contain eight courses at the 200-level or above, including two at the 300-level, plus the Junior Seminar. Five of the eight courses counted toward requirements must be taught by Department of Classics faculty. Three elective courses may be counted toward the concentration that are either cross-listed by Classics or approved by the DUS as relevant to the student's program of study. Of the eight courses, one must deal primarily with ancient literature, whether read in the original or in translation; the sequence of CLG/LAT 105-108 may be counted as a single departmental course and used to fulfill this requirement. One course must deal primarily with ancient history; this requirement may be fulfilled by taking any of CLA 216-219 (the Greek and Roman history surveys) or an approved alternative. One course must deal substantially with classical reception or comparative approaches to the ancient world; this requirement may also be fulfilled by study of another language relevant to the student's interests (Akkadian, Modern Greek, etc., at any course level). Students are otherwise free, in consultation with the DUS, to chart their own path through the Department's offerings.
